

BIO

Brett Clark

Brett Clark, APR, has more than 20 years of experience in K-12 public school districts and higher education. During his career with school districts, he served as both a communications director and human resources director. He currently provides communication services and community engagement support to school districts as part of his role with an educational non-profit organization in the Chicago area. Brett has been actively involved at both the state and national level in school public relations. Brett has a journalism degree from the University of Illinois Urbana-Champaign and has earned the Accredited Public Relations (APR) designation from the Universal Accreditation Board.