

Counseling Resource Guide

The following websites include professional organizations as well as a variety of other sites of interest for those in the counseling field.

<http://www.schoolcounselor.org/>

Packed with resources, the American School Counselor Association helps school counselors on the national level by providing many website links and resources, including liability insurance.

<http://www.ilschoolcounselor.org/>

The Illinois School Counselor Association is the state arm for school counselors. Each year, local counselors can attend the ISCA convention at an Illinois site to update their information and receive many new materials.

<http://www.ilcounseling.org/>

The Illinois Counseling Association is a useful site for consumers, students and counselors. There is information provided on the annual Illinois Counseling Association convention, as well as up-to-date published information and resources. Especially useful are the employment sources for counselors looking for positions.

<http://www.counseling.org>

The American Counseling Association website provides the latest in research and development and also holds an annual national conference. Also provided are online courses for continuing education credits, graduate listservs, ethics information and more.

<http://www.collegecounseling.org/>

The American College Counseling Association promotes communication among college counselors and provides resources and information on special events.

<http://www.apa.org/>

The American Psychological Association is the national association for aspiring and current psychologists. Included are the latest research articles on a variety of topics and convention information.

<http://www.aamft.org/>

The American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy is an online resource for counseling professionals who have concentrated in the areas of Marriage and Family.

<http://www.naswdc.org/>

The National Association of Social Workers helps professionals receive appropriate credentials and licensing in their state. Also provided are many resources on research, contemporary topics and employment information.