

Science Careers Resource Guide

The following websites include sites of interest for those interested in Science careers.

<http://www.sciencejobs.com/search.action>

ScienceJobs.com lists many career opportunities that are currently available around the world. Also included are the latest news articles about scientific research.

<http://www.sciencemag.org/>

Science magazine has many links through the website for a variety of topics, including information on special feature articles and science careers.

<http://www.sciencecareers.com/>

Sciencecareers.com has a top science career listings section and the ability to apply for jobs across the country. Special science links are also available.

<http://library.thinkquest.org/11465/main.html>

The Oracle ThinkQuest Educational foundation has a website that helps students discover science career interests.

<http://www.anl.gov/Careers/>

Argonne National Laboratory has a special web page that is devoted to science careers and special upcoming science-oriented events.

<http://www.aaas.org/careercenter/>

The American Association for the Advancement of Science website features support for career services and networking possibilities to hundreds of professional science-related organizations.

<http://nsgl.gso.uri.edu/>

The National Sea Grant Library offers science research opportunities all over the country, including Illinois and Indiana.

<http://careers.nsta.org/>

This website provides information on job opportunities for those interested in teaching science education courses.

<http://www.mastersindatascience.org/>

Site provides an entertaining look at the history of data science in prominent industries such as biotech and telecommunications, top Master's programs, and the skills needed to stand out in such a competitive new field.