

Starting Over: A Love Story for LGBT History Month at Governors State University

University Park, IL, October 3, 2017 – On October 21 at 8 p.m., MPAACT Theatre of Chicago presents Starting Over, a story of love, tolerance, and identity. Shown as part of LGBT History Month, this production follows a young biracial couple from an intolerant small town to a major city years later. Their difficult past must be reconciled with an even more difficult present: one of them is transgender. Can love roll with the changes?

Playwright Shepsu Aakhu says, “Love is complicated...not by how we look, not by who we love not by how we feel. Finding someone to love who loves us in return; someone willing to give, and forgive, to be strong for and be vulnerable with. A love story is such a simple story...and so damn complicated.” Hear more from the cast and playwright Shepsu Aakhu at a post-show discussion following the performance.

Shepsu Aakhu enjoys playwright-in-residence status with MPAACT, where stories seldom told on American stages are illuminated and brought to life. He has developed several critically acclaimed works in MPAACT's Playwright's Lab, including Speaking in Tongues/Babel, which Center for Performing Arts presented in 2013. Shepsu is a two-time recipient of the Theodore Ward Prize for African American Playwriting (Ten Square and Kiwi Black), six-time nominee for best Original Stage play (Aldridge Award) by the BTAA of Chicago, and the Ira Aldridge Award recipient (The Abesha Conspiracy, 1999, and Trouble The Water, 2007).

The cast includes Chicago actors Jerico Bleu, Sierra Buffum, Carly Jo Geer, Christopher Hand, Maria Montero, Shariba Rivers, and Keith Surney.

Director of the Center, Lana Rogachevskaya says, “We bring back MPAACT not just because of the originality and quality of their storytelling, but also because their work is authentic and real. Shepsu Aakhu is not afraid to reach into the core of hard issues, raising questions that may not have immediate answers, engaging his audience fully and holistically.”

Young, FM Supreme, Kevin Coval, and more.
